

TRANSLATION AND TRANSLATION STUDIES CENTRE

Founded in 2015, the Translation and Translation Studies Centre was conceived to engage and aid scholarship and praxis in the emerging fields of Translation and Translation Studies. The Centre strives to provide the necessary platform for scholars and students to hone their skills in the field with workshops, talks, lectures, courses, and seminars throughout the year. It has hosted erudite scholars like Mr Ajmal Kamal, Prof Harish Trivedi, Dr Indra Nath Choudhari, and Dr Sukrita Paul Kumar, among others, whose pedagogic expertise in the field has been beneficial for students, researchers and faculty alike.

The Centre has organised two international conferences, the first being the inaugural 3 day conference on the theme of 'Plurilingualism and Orality in Translation' as well as an International Hindi Conference in collaboration with New York University and Columbia University in 2020. The latter saw the release of Selected Short Stories, an anthology of short stories translated from Hindi to English by faculty and students of the college and edited by Prof Babli Moitra Saraf (Retd. Principal, IPCW) as a result of a collaborative endeavour between the Centre and Sahitya Akademi. It recently organised an international online lecture series on 'Women's Writings in India: Issues and Perspectives' in collaboration with South Asian Studies Program, Princeton University.

The Centre also publishes an annual student Journal of Translation, CODE. It showcases and invites translations by students from and in various Indian and other languages under overarching themes. It is in the eighth year of printing. The most recent issue, titled 'Prism Break', dealt with the theme of Multimodality, that is, translation from and to various media.

The Centre encourages the participation of students across disciplines in its activities. We invite enrolment of students from all three semesters. All duly filled applications may be submitted latest by 22 September 2022. The link for the enrolment form is as follows:
